

ABSTRACT

A titanium alloy part according to the present invention has a compressive stress of approximately 270 MPa or more within a depth of about 100 μ m from a surface thereof.

5 Since a large compressive stress exists in the area of the surface, the titanium alloy part according to the present invention exhibits a high fatigue strength.